Middough Hires Top Executives in East and Midwest Regions

John M. Alexander and Alan H. Yarosh join top engineering firm.

CLEVELAND, Ohio (May 3, 2016) — Middough Inc., a top ranking U.S. engineering, architecture and management services company, is pleased to announce the addition of John M. Alexander and Alan H. Yarosh.

“We are pleased to find two veterans within our industry with a long history of success,” said Middough Chairman and CEO Ronald R. Ledin. “John has extensive experience in the power industry and is no stranger to large scale EPC projects. He has travelled the world as a field service engineer, construction site manager and senior project manager, prior to following a career path toward business development. Alan is responsible for the operations management of the Middough Philadelphia office providing technical, operational and client relations leadership. He is a professional engineer in the state of Pennsylvania with over 30 years of experience leading a wide range of projects. Alan has a strong background in the refining, chemicals, pipeline and terminals areas.”

President and COO Carl E. Wendell states, “I speak on behalf of the Executive Team, we are impressed with John and Alan’s professional accomplishments and look forward to their camaraderie and entrepreneurial vision to help advance Middough in the engineering, architecture and management markets.”

Background on John Alexander

Mr. Alexander has held executive management positions in the power industry with the most recent being senior vice president and business development regional manager. His responsibilities have included the oversight of business development and marketing activities for new generation projects using fossil fuels and environmental (AQCS) retrofit projects utilizing an EPC execution approach. His responsibilities further extended into the development of strategic joint venture partners and other power markets that includes renewable energy (i.e. solar, wind, geothermal).

Background on Alan Yarosh

Mr. Yarosh previously was the vice president of construction and director of national business development for Nooter Construction where he was responsible for $100 million + annual industrial construction services. He was accountable for execution of all industrial construction services in PA, NJ and DE. Alan was responsible for all phases of job execution including job profitability, safety, quality, schedule, customer satisfaction and overhead management. He has strong experience in project controls including budgeting, planning, estimating and forecasting.
