Middough Achieves Prestigious Safety Awards

Middough strives to achieve zero accidents each year, and comes pretty darn close.

CLEVELAND, Ohio (July 15, 2011) — Middough Inc., a top ranking U.S. architectural, engineering and management services company, is pleased to announce that the company has recently been awarded three prestigious safety awards for its work in the field.

Middough has been awarded three awards recently. First, The Three Rivers Manufacturers' Association, in Joliet, Ill, presented Middough Inc. with the "Award for Meritorious Performance" for working the entire year of 2010 without an OSHA reportable injury in the facilities represented by their membership.

Secondly, The Northwest Indiana Business Round Table (NWIBRT) presented Middough with their "Achievement" award for having an OSHA total recordable injury rate below the national average, having an Experience Modification Rate (EMR) less than 0.9, and for having a safety management system that meets or exceeds the requirements of the NWIBRT.

Lastly, Husky Lima petrochemical refinery recognized Middough and the other contractors on site for working one year without a lost time injury.

"At Middough we believe in zero – zero accidents all year long," says Safety Manager, Tom Sexton. "This means that all of us do our part to ensure a safe and clean working environment for our associates and clients. We train everyone so that it's top of mind when they are in the field," states Mr. Sexton.

Middough has a very strong safety track record. Every new associate is trained on proper safety procedures and has to pass a safety exam before they can go to a client site. "The company takes safety very seriously and clients respect that," says Mr. Sexton. "We have gained a reputation for being one of the safest service providers in our industry, and we are very proud of that." he explains.
